Course Description

This is the first course in a two-course sequence designed to offer support and structure to students writing honors theses in Economics. In order to complete this course successfully and to be ready to continue work in the spring, students must write a research proposal. This proposal will consist of multiple parts:

1. Draft introduction – in the style common to academic articles in economics
 - a. Why is the topic interesting/important?
 - b. Clear statement of the specific research question
 - c. Verbal description of the methodology (with a placeholder for results to come)
 - d. Discussion of the contribution of the study relative to the existing literature
2. Data source description (empirical theses)
3. Proposed methodology, including a regression equation if empirical.
 - a. The proposed methodology must answer the specific question posed in the draft introduction.
 - b. If the thesis is empirical, the regression equation should be estimable using the data source identified

Students who successfully complete this proposal by the end of the semester will be well-positioned to finish the thesis on time in the Spring. Some students will be able to complete the

If you feel ill and think you might have COVID-19, if you have tested positive for COVID-19, or if you are unvaccinated or partially vaccinated and have been in close contact with someone who has COVID-19, you should stay home and follow the further guidance of the Public Health Office (contacttracing@colorado.edu). If you are fully vaccinated and have been in close contact with someone who has COVID-19, you do not need to stay home; rather, you should self-monitor for symptoms and follow the further guidance of the Public Health Office (contacttracing@colorado.edu). If you will be absent due to quarantine or isolation, please let me know and we will collaborate to help you make up the missed work. In weeks when we are meeting individually rather than as a full class, I will offer a Zoom option to minimize disruptions due to missed class time.
